The Logic of Dress-By Paul Poiret In HARPER'S BAZAR

M. Poiret Arranging a Jet Neckiace So That It Falls Just Within the Lines He Wishes. It Is in These Little Touches That M. Poiret Excells. The Gown Is the Mourning Dress Shown on the Right.

for a considerable period.

Individuality Is the Essential.

A woman is free nowadays to dress as she chooses, yet nine limes out of ten she does not avail herself of the privilege. Why does she lack the courage to make herself attractive, when on the other dares to be original. .

I dislike fashions. They make all a Logical Design. women look alike, and they reduce should be infinitely varied, distinctive other art; and I would have the promise with any fad or fashion. and attractive. Routine is never adept in it exemplify her art by That is one reason why my dresses should button, or be placed so that it the Edges of the Garment Are to her. At least, I should admire her and brilliant hues indicate Joy.

A Silk Crepe with All the Radiant

By PAUL POIRET,

In the Current December Number of HARPER'S BAZAR.

since I began designing, years ago, I never could understand why fashion is supposed to convey the idea of mind, it means uniformity and bediousness. Fashion to me implies lack of taste, because a thing arbitrarily set up as a model for every-intelligence and Individuality. Ever since I can remember I have hated tion which has reigned in women's

Of course there was a reason for it clothes.

Coloring of the Orient Has Been

Used by Poiret in This Gown. Note

the New Muff Sleeves Which Like

Finshed with Real White Skunk courage.

has a novel and interesting little essay upon the logic of dress. So unusual is the viewpoint that by permission of HARPER'S BAZAR the article and some of the fascinating photographs that illustrate it are reproduced on this page.

I would have women wear what- 65 their suitability-the old principle self ridiculous by the occasion. Those three things are to one other principle-logic.

agreeable. Individuality is charming. dressing consistently with conditions are unusual and in advance of the might button, but placed haphazard I would have a woman dye her hair and with her own state of mind. In prevailing mode. The so-called harem on a dress it spoils the logic and purple, if purple hair was becoming other words, sad colors typify grief skirt, for example, was developed to consequently the ensemble.

hand she is quite ever is suitable to them, consistent of the Romans-decorum. But they original statuettes. Do not start out willing to make her- with their social position and with should be worn and made according that the gowns I create are entirely different from the designs of other makers. If they are different it is not meant to button. A button is not Dress is an art—an art to be because they are logical. They are an ornament—it is an object of to one standard something which studied as conscientiously as any designed and executed without com-presented, but it is now approved. The logic in a design should be completed. A dress showing the panier effect is illogical with a Grecian border of a divided skirt. If you want a panier, then see to it that If your gown is to be built en Oriental lines, then have no stiff laces or Medici collars to upset the fundamental scheme. If the Tanagra is your model, then see that your draperies are exactly like those of the with straight lines in your design and permit them to develop into bulgy curves. Build a gown as logically as an architect plans a church. Every garment, in fact, should be architecturally designed. Have Meaning.

I abhor on a dress buttons that are utility. If it does not serve any pur-its logical conclusion. It proved Draperles are beautiful when logic-

Clothes should be chosen according somewhat of a revolution when first ally handled; otherwise they are

York To-day," Young girls have their cards separately after a year or two in society and are expected to assume their obligations about making calls, although a daughter should accompany her mother in making first calls or ceremonious calls. A girl who has been in society for a few years may relieve her mother of a certain amount of formal card-leav-

The rule is that first calls should be returned within a week, although some persons claim that within a new acquaintance a call must be made within a week after the enter-

3 and 6 o'clock in the afternoon. A 'formal call does not exceed fifteen or twenty minutes.

membrance. For instance, a card is sent with flowers, books, bonbons, fruit, or any of the small gifts of-

should be written. visiting card but an informal mes. And when the woman who wears it sage or invitation. It is not proper takes a step you tremble lest she disto write an acceptance or a regret arrange a fold and ruln the garment. on a card.

Cards of condolence or sympathy are sent to friends in bereavement, is logical. Nothing about drapery with the words "With deep sympa should give the impression that it thy" written across the top. Of hampers the wearer. Drapery should course, one should if possible, call and leave cards without asking to see any one, but if this cannot be arranges the pleats, the material Copyright, 1913, by the Star Company. Great Britain Rights Reserved quite the opposite. They are tex tremely difficult to handle unless logic is kept in mind. A drapery Nothing may ever be written on a was possible to make it hung together.

The Back View of the Black and White Mourning Cos-tume Showing the Skilful the Black Velvet Panel of the Wrap. The Arrangement of Poiret in His Argument on the Logic of Dress.

An Original

Poiret

Model Made

for the

Russian

Ballet.

It Is

Developed

in Mahogany

Faille

with Yoke

Sleeves and Belt of

Black Velvet, Drapings Are

Gathered in a Fitted Band of Black Velvet Embroidered in

Coral and Gold and Edged with Skank to Match

Scarf and Cuffs.

To be able to move about in a dress folds as soon as the wearer is in repose, leaving the impression that no harm had been done, on This Page Copyrighted by and Published by Permission HARPER'S

Logic in a dress, to my mind, stands for beauty. Decorum and logic-these are the two things which should govern a woman in the choice of her dress. Fashions should be ignored. A prevailing mode may guide a woman-but nothing morefor the really well-dressed woman ought to fall back into the logical never follows it blindly.

QUSTOM regulates the matter of cards and calls. Social visit-ASHION! That appalling word! ing has an established code, At least to me it is appalling and the rules should be understood because it stands for that which regulate visiting cards and which I have rebelled against ever These bits of pasteboard are required to do duty on many occasions. For centuries they have been the accredited representatives of whimsicality and amusement. To my their owners. They are the means of discharging social obligations, and the endless interchange of cards between friends and acquaintances may be truly said to keep society united. Without these useful little body to follow is an insult to one's bits of pasteboard social debts could not be paid. Cards are very often reminders to acquaintances of our very existence as well as a step routine, and I have been opposed to toward renewing friendships or enthis artificial and absurd generaliza- larging a circle of friends.

Cards are often expressions of kindliness, sympathy, condolence or congratulation. In fact, there are few things more important than the

in olden times when sovereigns of a etiquette of cards and calls, country set the fashions and the having received invitations to a mechanism for weaving textiles was wedding breakfast, a dinner, lunchimperfect. It was then logical that eon, card party or theatre party. women should follow the fashion, for The reason is that invitations of this the lady in waiting copied the dress sort are personal. They are not inof her Queen, as the most delicate of vitations of a general nature to gencompliments. In turn, the lady in eral affairs, but are an especial or may be laid down unobtrusively card: mark of courtesy or compliment. waiting was copied, and so it spread Church weddings, teas or large refrom one circle to another. At the ceptions may be classified as gen- card-leaving, men being considered same time, the manufacturers pro- eral affairs. A church, for instance, duced materials required for such a is supposed to be ample enough to costume. And as it took a long time hold a very large number of persons and general acquaintances bidto readjust a loom for a different de- den to a wedding. They may be sign or fabric, the fashlon prevailed present or not, as they please.

The proper acknowledgment of the invitation is to send cards on or after the day of the event to those courtesies and hospitalities. in whose name the invitation was issued and to the newly-married pair. If in doubt as to what may be the new address of the bride. cards are sent to the home of her parents. These obvious points are explained herein because they are frequently a problem to the inexperienced. The same rule applies to sending cards in acknowledgment of marriage announcements. On the occasion of a tea a hostess sends cards to her general list of friends. Thus she notifies them that she will be at home on a certain afternoon. They are not obliged to go. If they go, they leave cards so that the hostess may be reminded of their presence and may give them credit for coming. If they cannot go, cards are sent on the day of the tea, and duty has been fulfilled. It is not expected that a call should be made afterward.

If a lady has a day for being at Card-leaving is necessary after home, her friends should try to call at that time.

A card is a reminder of one's call and address, and it is left whether the hostess is at home or not. may be laid down on the hall table when entering or leaving a house on any convenient table.

Women attend to the duties of exempt from making calls when they have wives or mothers to leave their cards, but of course a young

By Mrs. Frank Learned, AllS Author of "The Etiquette of New not sufficiently punctillous in making prompt acknowledgment of

The general rule to remember is that a married woman leaves her husband's cards with her own when making a formal call, whether it be the first call of the season or a call as an indebtedness after an invitation. She leaves one of her cards for each lady in a family and one each of her husband's cards for each lady and one for the man of the household. If she has a son she may leave two of his cards. If the lady on whom she is calling is at home she places the cards of her husband and son on the hall table and sends her own card by the servant. In future calls during the year It is not required that she should leave her husband's cards, unless, as has been stated, in acknowledgment of invitations. Her son assumes his own obligations in

The old custom has been revived of having a card "Mr. and Mrs." This simplifies matters generally, as a woman leaves one of these cards and one of her husband's cards when making a call. During the first year or two of a girl's entrance in society her name is beneath the mother's name on a

Mrs. Henry Mason.

Miss Mason. If there are two or more grown daughters, the custom is to have "The Misses Mason" under the mother's name. if a younger man must call on his hostess after a daughter is making her entrance to dinner invitation. It is to be re- society her name may be beneath gretted that some young men are the others, "Miss Winlfred Mason." done cards are sent by post, must come from somewhere and end somewhere. I mean it must start, logically, at the shoulder or the waistfortuight is allowable. When you line, and it must be caught at the have accepted an invitation from a other extremity by a buckle, a bit of passementerie, or an ornament of some kind. But the flow of the ma-The hours for calling are between terial must be in accordance with the lines of the gown, and there must be an apparent reason for its use. Some-Cards of compliment or courtesy times you see draperles that come save time and express a kindly re- from one knows not where, caught here and there, everywhere, one knows not how; and instead of adfered among friends. In acknowl- miring the dress or feeling the pleasedging these attentions it is not ing effect of the ensemble, you wonproper to send a card in return. A der how the dress is made, how it fall naturally, and if walking dis-following unbecoming styles in dress? the only ones that should be con- In my work I have always tried to That is the curious thing. A woman sidered in the choice of a dress, and be logical. I conceive an idea, or get considers herself clever if she imi- they should be adhered to rigorously. a suggestion which I think will work tates other women, even to the point For example, I consider it a crime out well, and I carry it out to a of absurdity, and is fearful of at- for a woman to wear conspicuous logical conclusion. People tell me Draperies, Too, Should tracting too much attention if she jewels in the morning. Build a Gown After